The full-day interactive workshop will look at how participants will be able to access openly available data sets, both globally and regionally, the use of cost effective and accessible technologies to collect ocean observations in sparsely studied regions and using these data sets in openly accessible model systems to provide operational and research support. In terms of outcomes, we want to raise the profile of accessible tools to young scientists and technicians from the WIOMSA region, create a workshop report which will have all this information easily at hand (and thus used over again) and create a Community of Practice of participants to support budding collaborations.
